Contact Us OKQ: Deploy multiple Web Apps on Application Role in Azure I have created a couple of Web Apps and registered with an Application Role on Azure. After the application is up and running on the Application Role, if I need to add more Web Apps to that same application role, do I need to create a new application role again? Or does the role act as a container so I can add more Web Apps to it without having to recreate the role? I found out I have to make a new role when I try to add a new Web App and its not automatically added into the existing role. A: You need to redeploy each application to it's own role. This is because when you add an application (web app or service) to the role, the application is being deployed to a role/instance of that role. But when you scale your role, you might want to not redeploy a running application but to add more instances to a running role. The other possibility is you can add the role to an existing instance. In this case the RoleInstance will be scaled and be a replica of the role configuration (contents, role definition, role settings, etc.). Q: Attempting to read a value from a text file I am trying to use the DataTable Format function to read in a list of names from a text file. My problem is that they all get appended to one value. The idea is that someone can add a new item to a list and it will be easily added to the text file. Here is my code: public Form1() { InitializeComponent(); MyDataTable format = new MyDataTable(); format.Text = "Where Do I Find? (Please Help)"; } private void
